Chillier-than-average pattern. Blocking pattern of B.C. coast contributing to cold snap, though mid-week warm-up could see temps rise to –16 C

MORGAN MODJESKI
Metro in Saskatoon

Saskatchewan residents looking for relief from the province's bitter deep freeze will have to wait, as Environment Canada says there's more cold weather to come.

High temperatures in both Regina and Saskatoon are expected to hover around -20 C in the coming week — the lows touching near the -30 C mark, not factoring in wind chill.

Despite a potential mid-week warm-up, Saskatchewan's two largest cities will see highs of -13 C colder than average.

Environment Canada meteorologist Dan Fulton said while such low temperatures are not unusual, getting locked into a deep freeze so early in the season is uncommon.

"It's a little early in the winter to get locked into this much of a colder-than-average pattern," he said.

"Usually it's more maybe January, February where you get locked into an extended stretch of -20 C with the highs — but it's not unprecedented."

Environment Canada reported a blocking pattern on the B.C. coast could be blamed for Saskatchewan's cold weather, as the stationary atmospheric pressure mass is preventing warm air from the upper-level westerlies from travelling across the Rockies.

"What that means for us here in the Prairies is that we're stuck in pretty much a consistent northerly flow," Fulton said.

"It's basically uninterrupted air from the Arctic and it's going down fairly deep into the United States."

Despite predictions that the province's major urban centres will stay well below average highs, the upcoming week will be slightly warmer than last week when Saskatchewan saw average highs of -25 C and average lows of -35 C, with some areas of the province seeing lows dropping to -40 C.

Apartment tenants facing eviction

Cathedral. Owner plans renovations and wants suites empty by February

MARCO VIGLIOTTI
marco.vigliotti@metronews.ca

Residents of a Cathedral-area apartment complex will spend the holiday season hunting for new lodgings after being served with eviction notices last week.

Nighthawk Properties has ordered all the tenants of the approximately two dozen suites at Viva Apartments on Rae Street to vacate by Feb. 1, so the firm can begin renovations on the three-storey building.

"On Nov. 29, I came home from work and there was a notice taped to my door ... an eviction notice," said Angela McLean, a resident of the complex, who is spearheading a public-awareness campaign about the evictions.

"It's a little scary. I lived here for five years.... It's completely unexpected and unjustified."

According to McLean, Nighthawk has refused to explain why the renovations are making it necessary to clear out the entire complex — or why the company couldn't wait for the evictions until the spring, when warmer weather would make it easier to move.

When contacted by Metro, Yashar Zahreh, operations manager with Nighthawk, said the company will not comment on the evictions, aside from the short written statement it has sent to Viva tenants. Zahreh also refused to release information about the building's owners, including their names.

He did, however, state that the building will be open again to renters once the renovations are complete.

McLean said the eviction has come at the worst possible time for tenants, who include families with young children and new immigrants.

"They are mostly families," McLean said.

"The reason they moved here to this building was it is close to a school ... to bus service and to downtown."

Murder charge laid in three-year-old boy's death

A man in northern Saskatchewan is accused of killing a three-year-old boy one year ago.

The boy died in December 2012, three days after police say they were called about a child in medical distress at a rural property near Garrick, 230 kilometres northeast of Saskatoon.

Police say the child was taken to Nipawin for medical treatment, but couldn't be airlifted to Saskatoon because of freezing rain that night.

According to police, he was transported to Saskatoon eventually, but died there in hospital on Dec. 7.

Sgt. Craig Cleary says the coroner reported the death was caused by blunt-force trauma.

The suspect, Shane Pashke, 33, of Garrick, faces a charge of second-degree murder.

He is scheduled to appear in court in Melfort on Monday morning to face the allegation against him.

Cleary says police are not releasing the child's identity until they see if a publication ban is requested in court. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Man dies after minivan collides with semi-trailer

A man was killed in a two-vehicle collision on Sunday afternoon in west-central Saskatchewan.

According to RCMP, a southbound minivan on Highway 21 veered into the northbound lane and collided with a semi-trailer at about 12:30 p.m.

The driver of the semi-trailer attempted to avoid the minivan but was unable to swerve around it, police said.

The sole occupant of the minivan — whom RCMP said was 20 to 30 years old — was killed, while the driver of the semi-trailer was not seriously injured. METRO

Bushwakker Brew Pub

People brave the cold overnight for blackberry mead

Fans of a once-a-year holiday beverage in Saskatchewan kept up their tradition of queuing overnight for the treat, though they had to endure wind chills below -40 C.

Eleven hours before Regina's Bushwakker Brew Pub released its 2013 edition of blackberry mead on Saturday, there was a lineup forming outside its doors.

Kyla Will, who was first in line, spent the night with two friends snuggled under blankets on a couch they'd brought themselves.

Close to 100 others were also there, including many in ice-fishing shacks.

The take-home bottles of mead are only available in limited quantities on the first Saturday of December. Last year's batch of 6,000 bottles sold out in a little over an hour.

"It's tough to swallow after the first one, but after that it goes down like juice," said Alan Currie, who waited in line wearing a snowsuit and a ski mask.

"It's more about tradition," he added. "And not many people get to have it."

Bushwakker served hot chocolate throughout the evening and also set up portable toilets.

The Regina bar has been offering the honey-based drink for about 20 years, but it didn't become a popular phenomenon until around 2005.

Shane Gosselin said he's been doing the overnight camp for the last four years. Surprisingly, he doesn't particularly enjoy the mead and generally gives it away.

"I don't know that I'd really profess that it's phenomenal stuff. It's just something that you don't normally get," he said. "So, for me, that's kind of the fun of it." CJME/THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bahrain, Algeria, Iraq get new exports of Canadian guns, ammo

Arms control. Canada has yet to sign the UN Arms Trade Treaty, an attempt to regulate the multi-billion dollar industry

Bahrain, Algeria and Iraq, countries with dubious human-rights records or a history of violent internal conflict, have recently become new buyers of Canadian-made guns and ammunition, an analysis of federal government data shows.

The analysis by The Canadian Press found that Canadian exports to those countries swelled by 100 per cent from 2011 to 2012, the most recent figures publicly available.

During the same time period, exports of Canadian weapons also increased to Pakistan (98 per cent), Mexico (93 per cent) and Egypt (83 per cent), where, respectively, al-Qaida terrorists, a deadly government war on drug cartels and seismic political upheaval have sparked violence.

Though Canada's arms trade is legal and regulated, analysts say the increases raise questions about the government's foreign-policy commitment to human rights, and its regulatory regime for arms exports.

"Diversification is a principle of business in this globalized economy. As we see western militaries decrease their defence budgets, military industries will be looking for new markets," said Walter Dorn, the chair of international affairs studies at the Canadian Forces College.

Canada's sales to Bahrain and Algeria skyrocketed between 2011 to 2012 — a period during which both countries suppressed pro-democracy democratic protests. "It is really strange timing that Canada would be increasing a sale of arms or military equipment, let's say, at this moment when Bahrain has been involved in violently repressing its own peaceful democracy demonstrators," said Roland Paris, director of the Centre of International Policy Studies at the University of Ottawa.

The Canadian Press provided a list of questions to the offices of International Trade Minister Ed Fast and Foreign Affairs Minister John Baird, but a reply from Foreign Affairs left many unanswered.

Foreign Affairs carefully reviews all exports of weapons to ensure they "do not contribute to national or regional conflicts or instability" or "are not used to commit human rights violations," the statement said.

Sensible B.C.'s campaign. Petition to force pot referendum unsuccessful

There was plenty of smoke, but ultimately no fire for Sensible B.C.

Campaign organizer Dana Larsen confirmed Sunday that the "citizen's initiative for a referendum on decriminalizing marijuana possession" has failed ahead of Election B.C.'s Monday deadline.

"We're not going to make it," said Larsen. "We're very proud of our team of canvassers and what we accomplished; 200,000 signatures is still a remarkable feat."

Larsen and his team needed to collect the signatures of 10 per cent of registered voters in every single one of B.C.'s 85 electoral districts in a 90-day period for the initiative to be a success.

"We're not done counting yet and there are last-minute signatures coming in, but it looks like we reached the threshold in about two dozen ridings," said Larsen.

That's well shy of the 85 required, though Larsen says they reached two-thirds of their goal.

Rampage

Man slams six police cars

A 38-year-old man is in custody after he allegedly slammed a truck into six police cruisers and flooded a hospital in what police are calling a "destructive rampage."

According to the RCMP, around 1 a.m. Sunday, the man allegedly smashed a Jeep Cherokee that had been reported stolen into an unoccupied police cruiser. But the so-called rampage really began when he traded in the smaller vehicle for a five-tonne rental truck parked nearby.

Police say he backed the semi into two more parked police cars and proceeded to crash into three other cruisers, the abandoned Cherokee, and, finally, a utility pole.

By then, police had arrived, and they arrested the man as he attempted to run from the scene. Officers took the man to Burnaby General Hospital, but he jumped out of his hospital bed and yanked off a sprinkler head. Water poured down from the pipe, forcing staff to shut down the emergency ward.

South Africans unite to remember Nelson Mandela

Farewell to a hero. Mourners of all races come together to celebrate the man called 'that moonlight in the dark night'

People hold hands as Reverend Ndumiso Gawe leads them in prayer outside the home of former president Nelson Mandela in Johannesburg, South Africa, Sunday. South Africans flocked to houses of worship for a national day of prayer and reflection to honour Mandela, kicking off planned events that will culminate in what is expected to be one of the biggest funerals in modern times. MATT DUNHAM/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

In death, Nelson Mandela unified South Africans of all races and backgrounds Sunday on a day of prayer for the global statesman — from a vaulted cathedral with hymns and incense to a rural, hilltop church with drums and dancing.

Mandela was remembered in old bedrocks of resistance as well as former bastions of loyalty to apartheid.

"May his long walk to freedom be enjoyed and realized in our time by all of us," worshippers said in a prayer at the majestic St. George's Cathedral in Cape Town, where the first white settlers arrived centuries ago aboard European ships.

South Africa's reflection on Mandela's astonishing life was a prelude to a massive memorial in a Johannesburg stadium Tuesday that will draw world leaders and luminaries. They will gather to mourn, but also to salute the achievements of the prisoner who became president and an emblem of humanity's best instincts.

The extended farewell ends Dec. 15, when Mandela is to be buried in his hometown of Qunu in Eastern Cape province.

The anti-apartheid campaigner wanted to die in those modest, traditional surroundings; instead, he died Thursday at age 95 in his home in an exclusive Johannesburg area. He was surrounded by family after months of a debilitating illness that required the constant care of a team of doctors.

The Rev. Sebastian J. Rossouw compared Mandela to the biblical figures Isaiah and John the Baptist as men who led in dark times, calling him "that moonlight in the dark night."

God "sent us this man to show us the depths of the human heart, he sent us this man to show us that despite what was going on at the time, light could shine," Rossouw said.

Mandela's jailer

An unlikely friendship

He was with Nelson Mandela during all those years the anti-apartheid icon was imprisoned on Robben Island. And, like millions around the world, he has been hit hard by Mandela's death.

Yet this South African was not one of Mandela's fellow prisoners. Christo Brand was his jailer.

Such was Mandela's charm and ability to turn enemies into allies that even the black political prisoner and the white Afrikaans warden forged an unlikely but enduring friendship.

Mandela and Brand last met about two years ago when Brand, now in his 50s, brought his wife, son and grandson to see Mandela in Cape Town in a Sunday afternoon visit that lasted nearly three hours.

They had "nice chats about the past, about his family. He wanted to pick up my grandchild, to hold him, which he was a little bit shy to go to him. You could see he really reached out for touching a child at that moment," Brand recalled.

Christo Brand FACEBOOK

"When I got the message when he passed away, it was very sad for me," Brand said Saturday. "But I think he was successful and he did what he wanted to do. I wanted him to go in peace and I am thinking of the family today, what they go through."

Brand once again works on Robben Island, which is no longer a prison but a bustling tourist attraction. He and other former guards and prisoners tell visitors about the new South Africa's racial reconciliation.

Mulcair, three ex-PMs board Harper's plane to South Africa

A who's who of Canadian politics boarded Stephen Harper's plane to join the prime minister as he flew to South Africa to pay respects to Nelson Mandela.

Harper will attend a public memorial for Mandela on Tuesday in Johannesburg, as well as his lying in state in Pretoria on Wednesday.

He was accompanied by three predecessors: Brian Mulroney, Jean Chrétien and Kim Campbell. Joe Clark is already in Africa and will also join the delegation.

"He was a great, great man," Chrétien said of Mandela as he boarded the plane.

NDP Leader Thomas Mulcair also boarded the plane, but not Justin Trudeau, the Liberal leader. Instead, Liberal MP Irwin Cotler joined the delegation.

Ukrainian anti-government protesters rally in Kyiv

Revolution of dignity. Solution to the crisis appears elusive with the Russian-aligned government making no concessions

Angry anti-government protesters toppled a statue of former Soviet leader Vladimir Lenin in the centre of Kyiv on Sunday and blockaded key government buildings amid huge street protests, raising the stakes in an escalating standoff with President Viktor Yanukovych.

The biggest protest in the former Soviet republic since Ukraine's pro-democracy Orange Revolution in 2004 led the government to fire back. It announced an investigation of opposition leaders for an alleged attempt to seize power and warned the demonstrators they could face criminal charges.

The West pressed for a peaceful settlement.

Hundreds of thousands of Ukrainians flooded the centre of Kyiv to demand Yanukovych's ouster after he ditched ties with the EU in favour of Russia and sent police to break up a protest. Research. Drug from viper venom may prevent cause of heart attacks, strokes

It's one of the world's most poisonous snakes, and researchers hope the venom of the viper dubbed the "hundred pacer" can provide a medication to help prevent one of the world's leading killers.

A team of researchers has purified a protein from the snake's venom to develop an experimental drug aimed at preventing blood clots that can cause a heart attack or stroke.

The venom from the Southeast Asia pit viper is so potent that it is referred to by local residents as a hundred pacer — based on the belief that someone who is bitten will be able to walk no more than 100 steps before dying. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pope gives voice to 'cries of the poor'

Pope Francis, in the heart of Rome's fanciest shopping district, prayed on Sunday that the poor are never forgotten.

His appearance at the foot of the Spanish Steps follows a papal tradition of public prayer before a statue representing Mary on Dec. 8, a church holiday honouring the mother of Jesus.

That date also marks the official start of Rome's Christmas shopping season. Francis' route from the Vatican took him down Via Condotti, which is lined with swank designer stores. He prayed aloud that people "never be left indifferent to the cries of the poor." THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Eggciting idea: I can't believe it's not mayo!

Which came first, the chicken or the egg? Hampton Creek Foods hopes the answer is neither, as it aims to find plant-based alternatives for foods such as mayo

Trying to crack open a new market — CEO Josh Tetrick holds a species of yellow pea used to make Just Mayo, a plant-based mayonnaise, at Hampton Creek Foods in San Francisco. ERIC RISBERG/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The startup is housed in a garage-like space in San Francisco's tech-heavy South of Market neighbourhood, but it isn't like most of its neighbours that develop software, websites and mobile-phone apps. Its mission is to find plant replacements for eggs.

Inside, research chefs bake cookies and cakes, whip up batches of flavoured mayonnaise and pan-fry omelets and French toast — all without eggs.

Funded by prominent Silicon Valley investors and Microsoft founder Bill Gates, Hampton Creek Foods seeks to disrupt a global egg industry that backers say wastes energy, pollutes the environment, causes disease outbreaks and confines chickens to tiny spaces.

The company, which just started selling its first product — Just Mayo mayonnaise — at Whole Foods Markets, is part of a new generation of so-called food-tech ventures that aim to change the way we eat.

"There's nothing to indicate that this will be a trend that will end anytime soon," said Anand Sanwal, CEO of CB Insights, a New York firm that tracks venture capital investment. "Sustainability and challenges to the food supply are pretty fundamental issues."

Venture capital firms, which invest heavily in early-stage technology companies, poured nearly $350 million US into food-related startups last year, compared with less than $50 million US in 2008, according to CB Insights. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Possible benefits

Proponents of plant-based alternatives say there are many advantages:

- Alternatives to eggs, poultry and other meat could be good for the environment because it could reduce consumption of meat, which requires large amounts of land, water and crops to produce, backers say.
- It could also benefit people's health, especially in heavy meat-eating countries like the U.S., and also reduce outbreaks of diseases such as avian flu, advocates claim.

LAYOFFS A SIGN OF A 'STRONG' ECONOMY?

URBAN COMPASS

Paul Sullivan
regina@metronews.ca

Whoops.

We've encountered a pothole on the road to permanent prosperity here in Saskatchewan. The slight detour required means that 440 PotashCorp miners will lose their jobs just in time for Christmas.

Bummer. But no reason to panic, according to Premier Brad Wall, who says "Saskatchewan's diversified economy remains strong," which no doubt comes as a relief to the out-of-work miners.

It's hard to take the philosophical long view when you're out in the cold. And it's even harder to bear when PotashCorp cuts 18 per cent of its work force even though it earned $356 million in the third quarter of 2013. That's in three months, folks. So that's what you do when you earn $356 million in a quarter? Lay off nearly one in five of the people who work for you?

And I can't speak for the laid off miners, but when your CEO is routinely among the highest paid executives in Canada and made an eye-popping $320 million in 2007, you might be feeling a little potashed right now.

Even more galling is the fact that the reason the price of potash has dropped really doesn't have much to do with the cycle of supply and demand. It's mainly because two companies involved in the Russian-Belarus potash cartel are in the midst of a tiff, so they're not conspiring to manage the supply and keep the price high.

It's hard not to make comparisons. Belarus arrested the head of its potash cartel; Brad Wall sent a strongly worded letter to PotashCorp CEO Bill Doyle. Uralkali boss Vladislav Baumgertner is cooling his heels in the notorious Lefortovo prison in Moscow; Bill Doyle is free to collect his bonus.

That's democracy for you.

Don't get me wrong. I'm not suggesting we arrest Bill Doyle (although if he keeps making astonishing statements such as the dividend PotashCorp pays to its shareholders is "sacrosanct," we should at least make him take compulsory media training). I am suggesting though that Bill Doyle's and Saskatchewan's interests do not always align.

To his credit, the premier understands this. But while it may not be time to panic, it's important to remember that exports represent 40 per cent of Saskatchewan's gross domestic product and that potash and petroleum and wheat make up two-thirds of those exports. Whatever you want to say about Saskatchewan's economy, it is not self-sustaining. It remains vulnerable to the shenanigans of the Vladislav Baumgertners of the world.

And, closer to home, to the corporate choreography out of the PotashCorp corner office.

Meanwhile, if you're a laid-off potash miner, you'd like to believe the premier when he says the economy is strong, and hope you'll be back on the employment rolls by Christmas.

But you're left to wonder: If this is what Christmas looks like when the economy is "strong," how will it look during the next recession?

Cricket goes deep in the ground

The world's first underground cricket match has taken place in a slate mine under a mountain.

The unique sporting fixture saw village clubs Caldbeck and Threlkeld play 600 metres (2,000 feet) deep inside England's last working slate mine at Honister in the English Lake District.

METRO

The treasurer says

"It was murky, water was dripping off the sides of the mine, the ground was muddy and the balls kept ricocheting off the walls. But it was a nice game, despite our team losing."

Michael Webster, treasurer of Threlkeld Cricket Club
The match was won by Caldbeck after they scored 28 runs with one over and four balls to spare.

Club raises money with extreme game

In June 2012, Threlkeld was hit by a flood that wrecked the club's cricket ground. To raise money to fix it, the club invented Extreme Cricket — matches played in unusual locations, the photos of which are made into a calendar sold online. With proceeds from their site rainstoppedplay.org, Threlkeld hopes to have their ground ready in August. METRO

Where else?

- The game has also been played on a frozen tarn; on a mountain in the Lake District; on top of a steam engine; underwater in the local Derwent River; and inside a local theatre.
- The cricket club says it has no plans to export the quirky game overseas.

WE ACT:
CANADA DOES GOOD

Theatre for Peace

Across the nation in our neighbourhoods, Canadians are up to a whole lot of good. Here's one we'd like you to meet.

What: Theatre for Peace, a youth-empowering performing arts program.

Why: "Theatre has a way of really encouraging people to step outside their comfort zone and develop confidence — that's what it did for me," says Stanley.

Two years ago, Stanley started Theatre for Peace, a program that engages Toronto teens to combine their interests for the arts with their passions for social issues. Eight to 10 youth participate in each 12-week course, choosing issues to focus on and working with industry experts to create performances to share with the community — from poetry to rapping to dancing.

What inspired you to get started? "Theatre is really, really important in my life. I wanted to be a positive role model to youth in my neighbourhood, and I thought they would benefit from being connected to people outside their immediate community."

What motivates the work you do every day? "The youth that I work with are amazing! It really fuels my soul to see the change and the impact in these youth. It makes me happy to see other people happy, and to see them flourishing and becoming confident people."

It took a dragon to drag actress Evangeline Lilly out of retirement

The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug.
She was done with her profession, then Peter Jackson called

RICHARD CROUSE
scene@metronews.ca

Evangeline Lilly plays the 600-year-old wood elf Tauriel in The Desolation of Smaug, opening Friday. CONTRIBUTED

The show Lost propelled Evangeline Lilly from unknown model to television star.

For six seasons she played Kate Austen on the hit series, earned a Golden Globe nomination, numerous Sexiest Women in the World titles and became the face of L'Oreal Paris.

But the trappings of fame didn't sit well with the Alberta-born actress.

"I'm a small town Canadian girl," she says. "It just doesn't jive with me."

So instead of looking for the next big thing following Lost's 2010 finale, she took a step back.

"My resolve to retire came when I realized it was actually the job itself that was killing me. I'm a very undramatic woman. I keep my life very simple. I don't have a lot of emotional energy to spend. I don't argue with my spouse. I don't make drama where there doesn't need to be any. I don't have girlfriends who are dramatic. I just can't stomach it.

"Having a job that required that I be at the height of drama emotionally for 14 hours a day, all day, every week for six years running was doing bad things to my health, to my psyche. I wasn't in a good place. I really believe if you're not happy, get out. It doesn't matter how much someone is paying you or how famous you've become, it's not worth it if you're not happy and you're not healthy."

It took Peter Jackson and a plum role in The Hobbit: The Desolation of Smaug to bring her out of self-imposed seclusion.

"When they asked me I was three months out of giving birth to my first son," she says. "I thought I had retired to a life of writing and motherhood. I thought I was done with acting. And then he called. I thought, 'This is too huge of an honour. I can't say no to this. This is something I had dreamed about since I was a little girl,' so I took the job."

In the action-adventure she plays Tauriel, a 600-year-old wood elf created specially for the film. She says the character is "driven by her desire to help the vulnerable and the weak."

We'll see her again as Tauriel next year in The Hobbit: There and Back Again and after that, who knows, although she says, shooting The Desolation of Smaug in New Zealand was "such a positive experience that it has actually changed my mind about my profession."

On powerful females

- Evangeline Lilly likes the soft side of her current role. "One of the things I struggle with, with powerful female roles in the media right now, is that often they are associated with male violence. If a woman can kill and slaughter like a man then suddenly she's a powerful woman, which I actually think diminishes her power. I don't think that makes them powerful. I like that this character is a softhearted compassionate elf driven out of her need for justice and her seeking of the truth. I think that is more a distinct female power. I think in the past vulnerability and compassion have been associated with weakness and I think they give a woman her power."

The Sound of Music.
The tweeps of the world weren't too kind to Carrie Underwood's portrayal of Maria but Julie Andrews gave her blessing to the role

MELINDA TAUB
Metro World News in New York

Twitter was pretty rough on Carrie Underwood during NBC's live production of The Sound of Music last night — partly because Twitter is not known for its kindness and restraint, but also because so many musical theatre fans felt protective of Julie Andrews and her original performance as Maria.

But one person who felt just fine about Carrie Underwood stepping into her dirndl? Julie Andrews herself.

Country singer Underwood revealed that she reached out to the legendary musical star before taking on the role.

"She's so wonderful," Underwood told E! Online. "She's been so great to us and that means a lot. Whenever I do a cover of somebody's song or whatever, I always get permission of the artist first. I'm like, 'If you hate me, let me know and I won't sing your song!' So it was really really important for her to do that and, just, what a lovely person."

Well, of course she's lovely. She is Julie $%*#@ Andrews. She owns the copyright on lovely. She could kill a man with lovely at fifty paces. Do not even try to be as lovely as her, Carrie Underwood, because lovely is her thing, and she could lovely you to tiny country-fried smithereens. Oh look, I've become Twitter.

Trying to make off with a piece of history

What kind of a ghoulish creep does something like this? Sorry. Alleged ghoulish creep. According to E! Online, after Fast and Furious star Paul Walker's fatal crash, the parts of his totaled Porsche were gathered in a truck for transport to the impound yard.

Unfortunately, when the truck was stopped at a light, a witness saw a man get out of his car and grab a piece of the wreckage.

"The male drove away with the stolen vehicle part," the report said.

Luckily, police were able to trace the man and they tracked down the stolen part. One suspect, Jameson Witty, was arrested in his home in Tujunga, Calif. The car part, a roof panel, was found in a different home.

Police are apparently arranging for a second suspect to turn himself in.

Walker died in a car accident Saturday afternoon in Los Angeles, his rep confirmed. He was 40 years old.

Sharon Osbourne finds a new way to scare us all

STARGAZING
Malene Arpe

Sharon Osbourne shares that "it was just excruciating" having her lady-parts tightened by a surgeon. What? I didn't hear because I was distracted by the excruciating pain of sticking an ice pick in my ear. I have a feeling it was worth it, though.

Glamour UK names Henry Cavill the sexiest man of 2013 with Robert Pattinson and Liam Hemsworth in second and third spot, respectively. Tom Hiddleston is number four… . I apologize. That is the dumbest thing I've ever heard. In no realm are Superman, Sparkle Vamp and Not-Peta sexier than Loki. This list is obviously fake and stupid and I will say no more about it.

Joe Jonas says that he first tried pot when he was 17 and lost his virginity at 20. That explains why Miley Cyrus and Justin Bieber just laughed so hard they threw up on their own shoes.

Barbara Walters' Most Fascinating People list is comprised of an actress, an anchor, a pope, a prince, a swimmer, a singer, a data-leaker, a Kimye and some bearded duck people. Said John le Carré: "I smell a bestseller."

Olympic diver Tom Daley says that he's in a happy relationship with a guy while actress Maria Bello reveals she has a girlfriend. Dammit. That's not who I picked for the 2013 celebrity sexual orientation derby bifecta.

Doctors warn Bynes off going to school

Finally out of psychiatric treatment, Amanda Bynes is eager to go back to school for fashion design, but apparently her doctors think she shouldn't.

"Amanda was told by her doctors that going to fashion school so soon after being released from the Canyons (treatment facility) is an absolutely terrible idea," a source tells Star magazine. "It's almost setting her up for failure. There will be pressure on Amanda as far as school work, deadlines, and it's unlikely she will be able to succeed."

Parents not keen on reading e-books

Children's storybooks are in no danger of becoming extinct, suggests a report on how kids and parents are embracing e-books.

Based on the results of online surveys conducted for Booknet Canada, a non-profit industry organization that tracks sales and trends, it appears parents and children aren't eager to give up on the time-honoured tradition of flipping through paper books in favour of swiping around in digital content.

Of the more than 800 parents interviewed, about 41 per cent said they currently read e-books. More than 200 teens between 14 and 17 were also polled (with their parents' permission) and 27 per cent said they were e-book readers.

But few indicated they actually prefer digital books or could see themselves eschewing paperbacks for good.

Only one per cent of the parents polled said their kids aged 13 and under were at the point of reading more e-books than print books.

The researchers also asked parents how their kids were using mobile devices.

The report suggests just over 60 per cent of kids aged three or four have access to an Apple or Google Android phone or tablet in their home. Among 11- to 13-year-old kids, about 80 per cent had a device in their home.

Playing Santa on a budget

Gift giving. What do you do if your kid asks the Big Guy for something expensive? Metro's columnist has some ideas

IT'S ALL RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth
Kathybuckworth.com

Forty-one per cent of Canadians surveyed by Leger indicated budget as their top holiday stress. ISTOCK

'Tis the season to be stressed out, falalalala lalalala yikes.

While Christmas brings a lot of happiness to families, it can also be a frantic time, and the biggest causes of stress (according to a recent Leger survey conducted for PCFinancial) are associated with gifts: the buying and the giving. Forty-one per cent of Canadians surveyed listed budget as their top source of holiday stress, which was matched by 41 per cent also indicating they felt stress over choosing just the right gift. Clearly, finding the balance between the two is difficult.

For parents, it can be especially challenging when dealing with children, particularly those who assume it's Santa bringing their gifts, not penny-pinching mom and dad. But what can parents do when they know the most desired gift is well outside of even Santa's budget?

Have the kids make out a wish list, and check it twice to make sure they have listed more than one item. Budget or availability may make delivering that single desired object impossible. Explain to the kids that even Santa can be "out of stock" or have to spread his spending around.

Older kids (age seven-nine) should understand the value of money, even if they are expecting Santa to bring gifts. Suggest to them they can contribute earned chore money, or money saved in a bank account, to leave out for Santa, who can pocket the cash and deliver a more expensive gift in return.

Have a number and stick to it. It's easy to get stuck in the "evening out" trap when you have more than one child. If they are still counting the number of presents, fill some boxes with inexpensive candies or dollar store items.

The biggest joy of Christmas, according to the survey, is spending time with family (65 per cent), so it makes sense to give a (budget friendly) gift that families can enjoy together. Many kids ask for electronics, so look for one that can be shared.

Kobo has some terrific options to get families reading together, and its gift cards are an easy way to get new e-books, which can be given by other family members.

Cashing in loyalty points (as 46 per cent of Canadians say they will do) is a great way to purchase gift cards. A Cineplex gift card lets you share time at a movie with a family member. Give yourself a gift and deck those bills with vows of holiday savings.

GIVE THE GIFT OF KATHY'S, I AM SO THE BOSS OF YOU AVAILABLE AT BOOKSTORES EVERYWHERE, AND ON KOBO.

So you can't stand your friend's kids...

Julie Klam, author of Friendkeeping. SUBMITTED

He's the toddler who always bites. She's the 6-year-old drama queen prone to "it's mine" fits and hair-pulling. The problem, for you anyway, is they are your best friend's, your neighbour's or your exceedingly lenient big sister's kids.

With the holidays comes togetherness, sometimes thrust upon us. And with togetherness, especially the obligatory kind, comes major stress — for you and your kids. But friction over the offspring of loved ones strikes all year-round, leading the grown-ups to ponder whether their adult relationships are worth it.

Julie Klam, a Manhattan mom and author of the new book Friendkeeping, believes middle ground is possible.

"Do the best you can to see them without their children, but when they are around, take the anthropologist's point of view: 'Hmm, that's interesting that the kid is standing on a table throwing cheese at the wall,' instead of getting wound up in it," she said.

Looking for the worst in other people's kids, and by association other people's parenting prowess, is a road to nowhere, which may be where you land when things go dangerously wrong. But seriously troubled is different than the day-to-day grind of ill-mannered, bad-tempered kids and their parents who stand around and let it happen, by design or otherwise.

"If you're in your head keeping score of how rude they are, or whatever the things are that happen, it makes it much worse," said Klam, who has a 10-year-old daughter.

And before you take the fatal step of severing ties, "Stop and try to figure out how much of this has to do with you and how much has to do with them," Klam suggested.

Stuff your turkey with butter-nutty pecan flavour

Ingredients

Stuffing
- 1/2 onion, finely chopped
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup (60 ml) milk
- 2 slices of bread, cut into cubes
- 1 1/3 cup (325 ml) grated butternut squash
- 1/3 cup (75 ml) pecan pieces
- 5 oz (150 g) Gunn's Hill Five Brothers cheese, cut into small cubes
- Freshly ground pepper

Turkey
- 2 lb (1 kg) boneless skinless turkey breast
- 18 very thin slices of pancetta (about 4 oz/125 g)
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) thyme leaves

1. Preheat oven to 375 F (190 C).

2. Stuffing: In non-stick dry skillet over medium heat, sauté onion until soft. Let cool.

3. Beat egg with milk in a large bowl. Add bread and wait 2 minutes to allow it to soak up liquid. Stir in onions, squash, pecans and cheese. Generously season with pepper.

4. Turkey: Slice turkey breast in half lengthwise, without cutting all the way through, and open like a book. Cover with plastic wrap and flatten with a butcher's mallet or a rolling pin, until about 1/2 inch (1 cm) thick.

5. Spread bottom part with stuffing and close up turkey breast to seal stuffing inside. If desired, tie with string like a roast or hold in place using toothpicks. Place in a baking dish pan and cover top of turkey with pancetta and thyme.

6. Roast for 1 hour or until meat thermometer reads 170 F (77 C). Let rest 10 minutes before slicing. Serve with seasonal vegetables. DAIRY FARMERS OF CANADA (ALLYOUNEEDISCHEESE.CA/GRANDPRIX)

Have a ball — literally — with Pimiento Cheese Balls

This old-fashioned cheese ball is flavoured with pimiento (roasted red pepper), lemon and onion. Make these now, freeze them and glide through the holiday season!

Ingredients

- 2 tbsp (25 ml) unsalted butter
- 2 cups (500 ml) pecan halves
- 1 pkg (250 g) PC Aged Two Years Canadian White Cheddar Cheese, finely grated
- 4 oz (125 g) drained roasted red peppers, chopped
- 1 pkg (250 g) PC Original Cream Cheese, at room temperature
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) mayonnaise
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) fresh lemon juice
- 2 tsp (10 ml) grated yellow onion
- 1-1/2 tsp (7 ml) Worcestershire sauce
- 3/4 tsp (4 ml) salt
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) hot sauce
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) dry mustard

This recipe serves about 24. PRESIDENT'S CHOICE

1. In nonstick frying pan, melt butter over medium heat; add pecans and cook, stirring, for 5 minutes or until golden and fragrant. Transfer to cutting board. When cool enough to handle, chop coarsely. Set aside.

2. Place cheddar, pimientos, cream cheese, mayonnaise, lemon juice, onion, Worcestershire sauce, salt, hot sauce and dry mustard in large bowl. Using fork, beat until smooth. Using clean hands, shape into six equal balls. Roll each ball in chopped pecans to coat. Cover each tightly in plastic wrap. Chill until firm. Freeze until needed, up to 3 weeks.

3. To serve, thaw completely and serve with crackers, sliced baguette or celery sticks. COURTESY PRESIDENT'S CHOICE

Adam the monster hunter. The career of a cryptozoologist combines both science and the supernatural

As one of the world's leading cryptozoologists, Adam Davies has pursued the death worm of Mongolia and the Mokele-mbembe lake monster of Congo, the Sasquatch and the Yeti. The British explorer spoke to us about the need to make his passion more respectable.

Adam Davies is serious about a job that some might find silly. HANDOUT

What is cryptozoology?

It's basically looking for unknown or undiscovered animals, and that for me is about working with credible scientists. It's a broad sphere and you have to dismiss some of it. If someone says they saw a unicorn in their garden I'm not interested, but if they saw a rare primate in the jungle it's game on.

Artist's rendering of the Orang Pendek.
CENTRE FOR FORTEAN ZOOLOGY

Where are your hunting grounds?

In the last year I've looked for Bigfoot in the US, and the Orang Pendek — the Sumatran ape-man. I've looked for the Congolese dinosaur for the BBC and the Yeti in Nepal. I've been almost anywhere on the planet, mostly on my own time and money.

What is your number 1 ambition?

I've always been interested in bipedal primates and if I could prove the Orang Pendek that would be the find of the century. We've come close to proving it with hairs and prints, most skeptics would accept it's highly plausible.

Are these species being covered up?

I don't believe so as I have worked with governments on my projects. The problem is the species are very rare and elusive, as you would be if you were under threat.

Some of cryptozoology is just bizarre right?

It's a broad area and that's why it's important to work with credible scientists to corroborate findings. We need more rigor in the field, such as through sending hairs for DNA tests. But there is also a place for eccentricity. METRO WORLD NEWS

Facing adversity? Expectations can be a heavy burden

The severe market crash in October 2008 changed my life. I started running to regain my health, both emotional and physical. Shortly after I took my first steps, I ran the Gobi March in China in June '09, followed by the Atacama Crossing in Chile in '10 and the Sahara Race in Egypt in '11. In this post, I share a lesson about life, learned from the desert.

LESSONS FROM THE DESERT
life@metronews.ca

I started the Gobi March hoping to finish it. I ran free of expectations for the first four days, each a marathon in length. Somehow, I ran it very fast. I wasn't paying attention to the results, simply grateful to be there, each day closer to finishing the race. After the fourth day, I was then advised that I was in the lead in the 40- to 50-year-old category.

On the fifth day, it all changed. I started to run not to lose.

Each of us ran the race with about 25 pounds of food, meds, survival gear, and clothes in our backpacks. On day five, I started to add invisible baggage to my backpack; expectations, stress, and especially fear of failure. It no longer weighed 25 pounds, it weighed a ton, and I ran slowly and nervously. My mental narrative until then was "this is the most beautiful desert I've ever seen". Now, all I could hear myself say was "don't mess up".

I realized that my whole life had been lived with outcomes in mind. When I returned home, I became present to a much bigger problem; I put expectations on others too! I was adding weight to others' already full backpacks.

Today, I try to avoid having expectations around a specific outcome. I tell people I can be counted on to give my best effort, and I ask the same from others. The results will be what they will be. With this approach, I have since found that the results have gotten better.

Have you tried to give your best as opposed to try to meet expectations?

Bright ideas get a boost. Hootsuite aims to help young Canadian entrepreneurs make it big in business

The founder of the social media management tool Hootsuite started two businesses as a teenager, and now he wants to help other young Canadian entrepreneurs make it big for themselves.

Ryan Holmes began his rise into the business world by opening a pizza restaurant and a paintball company when he was in his mid-teens.

He's now offering a total of $100,000 in grants to 10 youth between 17 and 22 as part of his recently launched nonprofit foundation The Next Big Thing.

"About 100 kids have applied from all over the world," he said of the competition, which is open until Dec. 15.

Winners will get the kind of hands-on training that junior entrepreneurs need but can't access through the typical education route, Holmes said.

"I think there's a bit of a disconnect between traditional education programs and entrepreneurs," he said at Hootsuite's headquarters in Vancouver. "Often you hear about amazing entrepreneurs who ultimately are college dropouts."

"A lot of entrepreneurs are very experiential and hands -on learners and they need to just go and get into things. The goal of TNBT is to just get people into things, help accelerate them into a successful venture as soon as possible."

Holmes launched the foundation with fashion and film entrepreneur Meredith Powell, who also forged a business path at a young age.

"We're really looking for teens who might have started a business or have an idea to start a business," she said.

High-flying Seahawks fall prey to division rival 49ers

NFL. San Fran keeps its NFC West title hopes alive by edging Seattle

The San Francisco 49ers aren't handing over their two-year division reign just yet. And certainly not on their home field where they rarely lose against the NFC West.

Phil Dawson kicked a 22-yard field goal with 26 seconds remaining and the Niners held off the nemesis Seahawks 19-17 on Sunday, denying Seattle a chance to clinch the division at Candlestick Park.

Frank Gore broke a 51-yard gain with just more than four minutes left to set up the go-ahead 11-play, 76-yard drive as the 49ers (9-4) kept the playoff-bound Seahawks (11-2) from grabbing away the West in San Francisco.

Dawson's fourth field goal of the day gave him 20 straight converted field goals, a franchise record topping Joe Nedney's 18 consecutive in 2006-07.

Russell Wilson threw a 39-yard touchdown pass to Luke Willson and Marshawn Lynch ran for an 11-yard score for Seattle.

The 49ers are unbeaten at home against the West since losing to the Seahawks on Oct. 26, 2008.

In an emotionally fuelled afternoon of missed chances and costly penalties, this rivalry game more than lived up to the hype. Seattle was denied a chance for its franchise-best sixth road victory, while the 49ers know they need every win the rest of the way for their own playoff positioning.

Eric Wright, who briefly left the game with a head injury, intercepted a last-ditch deep pass by Wilson with nine seconds left to seal it.

The two young quarterbacks finished with nearly the same stats lines. Wilson went 15 of 25 for 199 yards and a touchdown with one interception, while counterpart Colin Kaepernick threw for 175 yards and completed 15 of his 29 passes with a TD and an interception. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Winning streak over

The Seahawks had their seven-game winning streak snapped since an Oct. 6 loss at Indianapolis. They had won the last two meetings, both at home, by outscoring the 49ers 71-16.

Jacobs books trip to Sochi

Jennifer Jones and Brad Jacobs will represent Canada at the Sochi Olympics. THE CANADIAN PRESS

It was fitting that Brad Jacobs sealed his right to represent Canada at the Olympics with one more big-weight double Sunday afternoon, and he never even considered a less risky shot.

"You're throwing that double to win the game," he said after beating John Morris 7-4 at MTS Centre in Winnipeg.

He said his third, Ryan Fry, told him it was coming.

"Fry said it to me, 'You're going to have a double either way here and we're playing it.' So my mind was already wrapped around some big weight shot before I even threw it."

Jacobs joins Winnipeg's Jennifer Jones, who defeated Sherry Middaugh 8-4 Saturday night to win the women's slot, the one prize that has eluded her in a championship-filled career.

Jacobs went into the game as the favourite, after earning his final spot by sweeping the round robin seven straight with a hard-hitting, muscular, fist-pumping brand of curling that delighted the crowd.

It's also clean and near perfect when it counts.

"That's our style," he said.

With no hometown heroes left to root for Sunday at the Tim Hortons Roar of the Rings, the crowd switched its allegiance to the Jacobs rink. It doesn't hurt that Fry — the son of Manitoba curling legend and Brier winner Barry Fry — was born in Winnipeg. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Gold medal fetches $1.4M at auction

♊ Gemini
May 22 - June 21
You may have to be cruel to be kind today. The planets indicate that someone you are close to emotionally needs to be reminded that they can't always have things their own way.

♋ Cancer
June 22 - July 23
Jupiter in your sign is giving you plenty of big ideas but because the planet of expansion is moving retrograde at the moment you must take care.

♌ Leo
July 24 - Aug. 23
Whatever your current problems may be they're not as bad as they seem.

♍ Virgo
Aug. 24 - Sept. 23
You will encounter hostility of some sort over the next 24 hours, most likely from someone who resents your ability to point out where they are going wrong. If it gets heated you would be wise to turn your back and walk away.

♎ Libra
Sept. 24 - Oct. 23
Make a point of respecting other people's right to have opinions you don't agree with. If you must criticize what they say at least do so in a civilized fashion.

♏ Scorpio
Oct. 24 - Nov. 22
No matter how honest you think someone may be you would be wise not to let them make decisions for you today, especially if those decisions involve your hard-earned cash.

♐ Sagittarius
Nov. 23 - Dec. 21
Some of the people you have to deal with today will drag their feet and find excuses why they cannot deliver what you require.

♑ Capricorn
Dec. 22 - Jan. 20
Someone you work or do business with has been taking liberties of late and you are almost at the point where you have to say something rude.

♒ Aquarius
Jan. 21 - Feb. 19
Try not to get excited about something that is not important today or you may miss out on something that is. There are so many distractions in your life at the moment that your brain cannot possibly keep track of them all.

♓ Pisces
Feb. 20 - March 20
If you are smart you will tone down some of your more outrageous ideas today, at least while in the presence of people you need to stay on good terms with.
